Six words a tool should use about a change to a client’s money, and what each one promises.

SOLID: TRUE NOW

Proposed

The exact change, the numbers before and after, and the evidence. Nothing has happened yet.

SOLID: TRUE NOW

Approved

A named person said yes, or a rule they switched on did. Written down, with the time.

DASHED: NOT TRUE YET

Not sent yet

There is still a window to take it back.
Nothing has reached the platform.

DASHED: NOT TRUE YET

Unconfirmed

Sent. The platform has not shown the new value yet. It is tempting to call this “Done”. It isn’t.

SOLID: TRUE NOW

Confirmed

Read back from the platform. Only now is the change true.

SOLID: TRUE NOW

Measured

+7 and +14 days later, against the account's own baseline: improved, worse, no change, or not enough data to say.

YOUR TURN

Ask your tools which of these words they use.

If the answer is “Done”, ask which one they mean.

I build Adspenta to use all six. I write here about what breaks when software touches client ad accounts.
